YACHTING OF THE WEEK

NEWS FROM ALL SECTIONS OF THE SUMMER COLONY OF GREATER CAPE ANN

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ramparts" occupies site of Fort independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

GEORGE S. MANDELL

In 1923 when preparations for the production of the Gloucester Tercentenary Pageant were in progress, circumstances arose whereby the chairman of that enterprise was obliged to carry forward on his own. A large sum had been expended and contracted for, the chairman being personally responsible. As sometimes happens in enterprises of this kind a venomous local opposition was directed against it in an endeavor at sabotage. But the Pageant was produced and proved the feature of the observance owing to the failure of the fishing schooner races. Mr. Mandell was appealed to, in regard to riders for a principal episode. His response was helpful and encouraging.

The day after the initial showing of the spectacle an extended and highly laudatory review appeared on the front and other pages of Mr. Mandell's paper The Transcript. The result was that the telephones for that and succeeding days were busy with orders from Back Bay district for boxes and desirable seatings which materially contributed in taking the proposition out of the red. This friendly hand to a stranger shows the quality of the man. Press notices stress similar incidents, as one of his outstanding characteristics.

TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION?

Why Should Not the Summer Resident Taxpayer Have a Voice in the Election of Municipal Officials? They Pay One-Third of the Taxes.

WE HAVE WRITTEN this editorial before but it needs to be reemphasized. One of the basic reasons for the War for Independence—in fact the principal reason as stated in the histories—was "taxation without representation"—that where a people was assessed for the cost of government they were entitled to a voice in the government especially as regards the disposition of the fund which they contributed to the common good. And in a Democracy, such as governs the Nordic races whether the titular head be a sovereign reigning by succession or a president elected at intervals, the proposition holds good. Many maintain that the British Parliament is really more democratic in operation than the government setup of the United States.

But it is in the application of this principle right at home that we are concerned. Stated briefly the summer resident practically, all non-resident, pays one-third the taxes which run the city. In addition they are assessed on a yearly basis for water which they enjoy at the most on an average of four months in the year.

In return for this taxation and exacted largesses they are debarred any voice in the choice of those who are to expend their money in the administration of municipal affairs.

Advocate such a non-resident representation and immediately the cry goes up that it is undemocratic. Yet the alien hardly able to get by the literacy test imposed for citizenship and with only the vaguest and haziest concept of what it is all about is permitted in droves to deposit his ballot and in the large cities dictates how much and how it shall be expended—or squandered.

Right there the student may put his finger on the weak spot in the American system of government. Indiscriminate immigration and also indiscriminate and unwise bestowal of the ballot on the unfit. Until this is remedied one may despair of good government in the larger communities. Why are the opulent cities of New York, Chicago and others almost hopelessly bankrupt?

Why are these localities the hotbed of the racketeer, the kidnaper and the holdup men? Their racial origin is indicated by their names. Where one Dillinger there are twenty such unpronounceable.

We are not advocating plurality of voting. A man should not be allowed to vote twice in a presidential election—or in any election for that matter—but certainly once in any community for which he is taxed as far as municipal candidacy goes.

There can be no honest argument against this. But there will be objection long and loud. The local politician whose stake in the city is hardly more than a poll tax payment relying upon a massed vote for continuance in power will undoubtedly oppose this proposal if set forward. But that is no argument against its equity; rather the opposite. It may eventuate.

HITLER

JUST two years ago, while the writer was riding front on a charabanc coming into a square in Heidelberg, we nearly ran into a crowd in its center. The leader—who wore dark khaki, the tunic with the high military collar hue of cherry red—was an individual with a trick, Charlie Chaplin mustache, head akimbo, arms folded, three-quarters silhouette, chin up, surveying our party with something of a look of hauteur. I remember being somewhat amused, harking back to a John Wilkes Booth photo for a double.

"Hitler," volunteered the driver. "I don't like that fellow." Der Fuehrer is a poseur no doubt, all his portraits and his movie pictures present the same identical pose and attitude. One such shown a few weeks since might have been filmed on the day referred to in the first paragraph.

Without in any way adverting on Hitler's policies let us evaluate the man as he stands today:

Hitler is of the type who in great national crises spring up apparently from nowhere and take command. This usually occurs when a nation is in a state of funk caused by some calamity—a crushing defeat—or sense of impending disaster. Recent example: The German people demoralized not knowing which way to turn for salvation. The Congress of the United States abdicating its powers to a president. Then appears some assertive individual. "Place me in power and I'll show the way out." So spake Hitler; so spoke Roosevelt. Like frightened sheep fleeing from an unknown terror almost en masse they accepted these men and offerings as the national savior. Sometimes it works. Cromwell and Napoleon.

Well, in the case of Hitler: The leaders of the old regime waiting the opportune time for restoration of the monarchy let the fever run its course. They tolerated and encouraged Hitler. With the nation's idol, von Hindenburg, in the presidency as the only possible brake on extreme Hitlerism they bided their time to be rid of him. That time seemed ripe about the last two weeks in July.

With determination of Hitler to get rid of von Papen came the crucial moment. Then Hindenburg for the first time bade him halt. The world waited tense to witness the outcome. The press of the English speaking world wrote in advance the early political obituary of Hitler. Finis for him.

But it was just here that Hitler rose equal to the emergency. Instead of openly opposing Hindenburg he bent to the breeze. When it blew over, to save his face he appointed von Papen minister to Austria. Hindenburg fast failing felt this reversal of his dictum keenly. He failed to rally from its effect. Time and tact had fought on the side of Hitler. The last will and testament it appears commended Hitler to the nation.

Sunday's election confirmed his absolutism and infallibility. Rallying to his side are all parties, the son of Hindenburg, one of the Hohenzollerns (prospective heir to the monarchy) and practically a unanimous nation. The army behind him, "purged" of malcontents some two months ago.

Hitler's strength from the first was based on his dictum that Germany should be treated with self-respect in accordance with its former position in the nations of the world. Every German enthusiastically endorsed that. And he succeeded measurably in getting that consideration and respect and as long as it be necessary he will retain power on that plank alone.

When Stanley Baldwin electrified the world in the House of Commons recently laying it down as British dictum that henceforth the Rhine and not the

GOOD NIGHT

(To the Departing Summer Guest)

By ALEXANDER G. TUPPER

Good night, dear friend, good night.

The day's fair beauty of sea and sky

Now sleeps beneath the canopy

Of crescent moon and star;

The harbor silent from the oar and seagull's cry

Is beaming with myriads of lights,

And overhead, the brilliancy of Mars

Reflects between the mast of fishercraft hardby.

Good night, dear friend, good night!

And should you chance this way again,

May Life's fresh dew be sparkling bright

To lend its thrill to Life's fair day:

May dear familiar scenes greet you when

You wake from winter's dream,

Rewarding you a safe return

And living o'er again Life's happy way —

The age of Summer blessing you again —

Till then, dear friend, good night!

THE ROAD TO SHOTTERY

ABEL MEEROPOL, in New York Sun

The road still leads to Shottery and back,

Between the checkered fields that Shakespeare knew,

But now no lovers leave the tourist track

To linger for a little, passing through.

A bacchanal of flowers amid the grass

Still beckons to the lover and his maid,

But sweethearts do not tarry as they pass,

To lay their heads together in the shade.

Few wander through the fields, and none remain,

But Beauty walks with quiet footsteps there.

Midsummer magic in a country lane

Still weaves a spell upon the drowsy air,

And when the poppy and the hawthorn bloom

The dust of Shakespeare stirs in Stratford's tomb.

AT THE NORTH

SHORE THEATRE

Ann Harding and John Boles in "The Life of Vergie Winters" will be the screen attraction at the popular North Shore Theatre in Gloucester starting Sunday, Aug. 26th for a limited three day engagement. It realistically pictures the poignant romance of a gallant woman who dares to follow her own heart and ideals in defiance of small town gossip and persecution. Practically all of the action takes place in an American small town with special attention being paid to the colorful characters who go to make up such a community. In the splendid supporting cast are seen Helen Vinson, Betty Furness, Bonita Granville, Frank Albertson and Dorothy Sebastian.

On Wednesday and Thursday will be shown the screamingly funny W. C. Fields in "The Old Fashioned Way" with Baby LeRoy and Judith Allen. Fields is seen as the leader of a band of struggling vaudeville entertainers, who are dodging the sheriff in each town in which they appear. The troupe finally play Bellefontaine and the town's wealthiest widow, with operatic aspirations, falls in love with Fields and his troubles take on a new hue, especially when she brings along her young charge, Baby LeRoy. Others in the cast

EBEN COMINS

Eben Comins, well known Washington artist, who for many years has been coming to Gloucester, has taken one of the Reed studios, where he is showing his portraits of Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court, Robert U. Patterson, Surgeon-General of the United States Army, and Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard Law School.

Since interest in fresco painting has been revived, Mr. Comins has become one of the foremost contemporary exponents of this medium. He has frescos in the Presidents' room of the national Capitol, in General Devore's garden, and in the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Modernistic still lifes are taking much of this artist's attention at present. Mr. Comins, who is nothing if not versatile, has done one canvas in centrifugal design, involving the common squash, corn and onions. Another still life in the modern manner makes use of the royal cod, and in a third, two acrobatic ladies are doing stunts not seen in parlor demonstrations.

Mr. Comins showed two small sketches he designed for the hall of the new Gloucester Post Office, which unfortunately were unavailable through lack of funds. He is much interested in the art of young America, and deems it worthy of deep consideration.

OLD GLOUCESTER NOMENCLATURE

Historical Importance and Retention of Original Names --- Their Derivations

IN LINE with the movement for the perpetuation of New England antiquities is that for the preservation of the original nomenclature of various localities considered both from the historical and sentimental point of view. In many cases these names are but an index and a pointer to interesting bits ably the first is the correct answer. Magnolia is a designation of about seventy-five years ago. When the place began to come into prominence as a summer residence district the people of the place thought it better to change from the plebeian—as they thought—Kettle cove to Magnolia—swamps of

There is a sea-bass which might furnish the explanation but the name is seldom applied to fish in this sector. There is a Bass Rocks on the English coast.

Further along Little Good Harbor beach challenges inquiry. Back a hundred years or more, as ancient maps of local history. Cape Ann for instance.

Coffin's Beach more recently termed "Wingaersheek" Beach. Baronial home of Col. Peter Coffin in Colonial days. On his death bed he enjoined his sons to preserve the trees to prevent the sand overspreading the farm. Family fortunes declining, the growth was sold for ship timber and the prophecy was verified.

Beginning at its westerly boundary: What is now Coolidge point was originally Goldsmith's point so named on the old maps and up to a comparatively recent date. Kettle cove where the fisherman settlers took up their habitat when the Dorchester colony abandoned Fisherman's field now Stage Fort park in 1627. The name Kettle is derived either from John Kettle, probably one of the Dorchester settlers—the descendants of the family write the name Kettell—or from the fact that in the south of England the fishermen called a sheltered cove a "kettle." Probably southern bush being located nearby.

Similarly Norman's Woe and Norman's cove perpetuate the name of a Dorchester colonist, John Norman and sons, who left town for Connecticut before 1750.

Probably one of the widest known of Cape Ann names from Longfellow's pathetic poem "Wreck of the Hesperus." Skipping across the harbor to Eastern Point—the origin of the name is obvious. There are two designations along the Back shore—Brace's cove and Bemo ledge—of which the origin is obscure. Farther down is Bass Rocks.

demonstrate, the sea ran some hundred yards farther back inland. In the course of time the land has thrust back the sea and obliterated the little harbor which was just back of Briar neck. The Rockport fishermen used to run in there for anchorage and named it Little (but) Good harbor. Long beach needs no explanation. Further along on the Rockport shore is Loblolly cove which excites the questioning of the antiquarian. Loblolly was a dish of corn mush and the fishermen from Ipswich, fishing off this section, made temporary headquarters ashore at the place cooking their meals, etc. Loblolly was the principal cereal concoction of early colonial time. Hence Loblolly or the dining man's cove.

Thacher's island derives its name from a melancholy occurrence. August 12, 1635, a pinnace having on board Rev. John Avery, his wife and six children, Anthony Thacher, wife and four children and one other were blown ashore on the island during a gale and all but Thacher and his wife perished. They were bound from Ipswich to Marblehead where Rev. Mr. Avery was to assume a pastorate. As far as is known this was the first shipwreck on Cape Ann although there may previously have been a similar fatality at Norman's Woe. It was the custom in those days to name a place where a marine disaster of consequence occurred a "woe." Thacher's island was first known as Thacher's "Woe" giving place in later days to island. A large rock nearby is known as Avery's rock in melancholy remembrance of the ill-fated pastor.

A short distance off shore from Thacher's is a ledge called the Londoner on which is placed an automatic buoy. It was so named from the fact that at an early period a ship of that name foundered there.

To the northward of Thacher's are a series of submerged ledges called the Salvages. That was the name by which the Indians were called by the early settlers—at least they wrote the word that way—and from the supposed savage and crafty ways of the aborigines the treacherous ledges received their designation.

It is one of three islands in the immediate locality the others named Salt and Milk island, the latter because in early times it was used as a pasturage for cows. Perchance the early fishermen bootlegged some milk there for their loblolly. Champlain when he rounded the cape in 1605 called it Cape aux Isles—Island Cape—by reason of the prominence of these three islands. Capt. John Smith when he explored the cape and made a map of the coast in 1614 named it "the faire headlande," as he wrote "Tragibizanda" in commemoration of the Turkish maiden who saved his neck from the Turkish scimitar but on his return to England Charles I crossed it out substituting the name of his mother, Anne of Denmark. The three islands he named Three Turks Heads in recognition of a feat in which he challenged three Turks to mortal combat beheading the three hand running. What a man was Capt. John. Like Caesar he was his own press agent.

Proceeding along the Rockport coast such names as Whale cove, Long point, Straitsmouth gap, Headland's explain themselves.

Two derivations are given for Bear-skin neck. One was the formation of the land resembled the animal's pelt. Another that a settler named Babson single handed and alone met bruin on the neck, killed and skinned him and nailed up his skin on a fish shed to dry.

Coming to Pigeon cove: The name is derived from the fact that in early colonial times vast flocks of wild pigeons frequented the Maine coastline feeding on the multiplicity of berries in that locality. They migrated to warmer weather in the Fall. On one of these migrations while crossing Ipswich bay, vast numbers were overtaken by gale and over-powered. Falling on the water they perished and were washed ashore—hence the named derivation. These birds were so plentiful that in their flight they literally clouded the sun so it is said. They have been hunted so intensively that the species is entirely extinct as much so as the dodo.

Just beyond Pigeon cove coming to the Gloucester line is a small rock-bound cove known as The Folly or Folly cove. Why? Some one hundred-fifty years ago an enterprising citizen named Galloupe came here and set up a salt evaporating works to supply the fisherman. When he built a wharf in the cove, he was warned that nothing could withstand the intensity of the northerly gales which lash this part of the cape. But he persisted and built his wharf. Came the equinoctial and when it subsided Galloupe's wharf was swept away clip and clean. Hence Galloupe's Folly—now fined down to the Folly.

From Plum cove to Annisquam point the naming is all of local persons—early settlers. Across the river, so-called, is Coffin's beach renamed in recent years "Wingaersheek" beach. The original name comes from the first settler here Tristram Coffin who owned a baronial estate on which he kept some 50 slaves. The name Wingaersheek as has been shown in the SHORE is a corruption of the Dutch Wyngaerts Hoeck as set down on one of their maps made of the place and which was discovered by the writer in the archives of the New York Public library. Erroneously assumed to be the Indian name for Cape Ann.

Returning to the eastern side, the islands in the river have been named at various stages after their owners although the original name of Annisquam or Russ island was Biskie island. One of the hills is called Wolf hill, whether from its supposed resemblance to the wolf or possibly because the story comes down that a wolf was killed there "once upon a time."

Coming down the river to the canal named by the native early settlers the "Cut" we come to a place called by the early settlers, and the name still persists, "Donefudging." The derivation of this is said to be that in the early days the water there was shallow before the canal was deepened and those faring over the stretch of water were compelled to propel their boats by poling or, in the vernacular "fudging." When out of this piece of water and able to set sail they were done fudging. And there you are.

Originally Cape Ann was a promontory some one thousand feet of lowland separating the river from outer Gloucester harbor. In 1643, Rev. Richard Blynman caused the neck to be cut connecting river and harbor converting it into an island. Hence the name "The Cut." In recent years the name Blynman has been affixed to the canal.

Coming into Gloucester harbor the two islands, Five and Ten Pound, were so named for the amounts for which they were sold in colonial times. The Fort guarding the entrance of the inner harbor built on what was known in ancient times as Watchhouse neck was thrown up shortly after 1700 but much restored and enlarged in 1743. Returning to the westerly side of the harbor we come to the most historic ground on the cape, Stage Fort park. Here was the site of the first settlement in 1623 of the Dorchester colonists where they set up their house brought over from England and built their fishing stages. They named it Fisherman's field but was renamed Stage Fort from the fact that in 1625 defences were set up there by Capt. John Hewes, leader of an independent group of fishermen who Myles Standish of Plymouth unsuccessfully tried to oust. The fort now restored has been garrisoned in six wars probably the oldest in New England. The rocks off the westerly beach they called Field rocks.

Further on is Freshwater cove so named because the early fishermen resorted to the place to secure a supply of water, a brook of superior quality of water emptying into the cove. So completes our circuit of the waterline of the cape.

In the center of the cape is the well-known Dogtown commons the site of a settlement of the early fishermen who chose this out-of-the-way spot as a refuge against pirates and marauders which infested the New England coast and also because the place was thickly wooded giving a supply for the Boston market. It was originally allotted as common ground to the settlers here before 1725. In the course of time by

MAGNOLIA BEACH CLUB

The buffet supper and dance held under the auspices of the Magnolia Beach Club last Saturday night was a great success, a large number of guests attending.

The Club is planning to hold a corn roast on the beach for the children on August 28.

The young people of the Club gave the third in a series of dances on Friday night. The patronesses were as follows: Mrs. E. Sampson, Mrs. R. F. Herrick, Jr., Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. T. C. Chase, and Mrs. S. S. Stevens.

Arrivals at the North Shore Inn: Mrs. Nellie Padoll, Somerville; Katharine F. Galludet, Hartford; Jessie Ferber, Mrs. Susan Lawrence, New York; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Harnett and daughter, Ridgewood, N. J.

Recent visitors to the Hammond Museum were Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim of New York, Mrs. Isaac Gimbal of Port Chester, N. Y., Mrs. Edward C. Goldstein of Baltimore, Mrs. Adolf Grant of New Rochelle, who have been touring the New England States.

Col. and Mrs. E. M. House are seen frequently walking up and down the sidewalks of the Main street of Gloucester. Evidently the old town with its quaint atmosphere attracts them as it does many others — an atmosphere all its own not to be found elsewhere.

The Gloucester Society of Artists is planning an entertainment to take place in the near future, although as yet no definite idea as to what form it shall take has been decided upon.

Mr. Leonard Craske gave another of his lectures on color photography on Thursday evening. The subject was "The Four Seasons."

At a recent meeting of the Gloucester Society the same officers were re-elected. Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne was appointed chairman of the exhibition committee, and Mrs. Maude F. Berneker chairman of the house committee.

Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne and Mr. Gordon Grant have extended their exhibition held at the Sargent Murray Gilman House until August 27 on account of the great interest shown by the public in the works of these well-known artists. Miss Browne is showing her portraits of Cape Ann characters, and Mr. Grant his mural over-mantels.

The official opening of City Hall auditorium will be held on August 23 when the work done there under the CWA and the ERA will be exhibited and explained.

STAGE COACH INN

"Ye'd best bide here," the boniface said,

"For the night wind whistles shrill,

"It's five long miles to Gloucester town,

"And most of the way's up hill.

"Come, strangers all, I pray you stay,

"On my hearth a fire burns bright,

"Tis in peril ye'd be from the steep dark road,

"And the rascals that ride at night!"

(From "Lyrics of Gloucester Town")

Among those dining recently at Stage Coach Inn were Mrs. T. H. Harrigan, Priscilla Tarr, Esther Tarr, Martha F. Low, Marjorie Hawks, Gloucester; Robert M. Whittemore, Mrs. Philip M. Tucker, Nancy Tucker, Brookline; Mary Jane Dewey, Belmont; Mrs. G. F. Drew, Miss Entingir, Miss Rolland, Mrs. D. W. Terwilliger, New Town, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Vaughan, Philadelphia; Wentworth Boynton, Baltimore.

CONOMO POINT

Judge and Mrs. Robert A. Hill of Salem are at Conomo for another season.

Among the Winchester colony every year are Mr. and Mrs. Harris S. Richardson who are raising a family of enthusiastic yachtsmen. Harris Jr., Thayer, and Dorothea are the names of the young Richardsons, and they're staying at the Farnsworth cottage.

The Farnsworth family, who for more than forty years have been cottagers at Conomo, are represented by Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Farnsworth of Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Norton also of Winchester, have rented the Youngs' cottage for the season.

Another Winchester family who are making their home here once more are Mr. Kingman P. Cass and son, Donald.

Mrs. Thomas Ringer of Fall River is a cottager who has returned for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Leroyd of Bronxville and their popular daughters, Betty, Janet, and Anne Page, are at the Point again this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Spencer of Winchester and children, Richard, David, Janet, and Kendall, are making another summer sojourn at Conomo.

Mr. and Mrs. John Chaplin of Connecticut and their two children, Jack and Jill, are spending another season here.

Hills, Townsend Hills, Julian Hills, Albany; Mr. and Mrs. Wallis Griffin, Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Brown, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Captain Townsend Hills, of the First Division at West Point, a guest at the Delphine, has been ordered by the government to Texas, where he will join the Aviation Corps.

A party from Worcester who have been stopping at the Delphine recently included Mrs. Celia Bennett, the Misses Ruth L. Bennett, and May Richardson, and the Messrs. John D. Bennett, Marcus Wells, Andrew B. Sharon and Warren R. Cummings.

EASTERN POINT

Mr. and Mrs. Jock Raymond have recently returned from a cruise to Quebec on the yacht Intrepid.

The Rouse Cup tennis tournament is on in full swing at the Prentiss estate, "Blighty." The final match will be played next Wednesday.

Mrs. Winthrop Cowdin is coming from Newport next week for a short visit to Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard of "Barlovento," Eastern Point.

BASS ROCKS

The Bass Rocks Golf Club is a busy place these days what with luncheons and teas and the Farr Cup Tourney and all. Speaking of luncheons, Mrs. Nash and Mrs. Arthur T. Safford each gave one, with bridge following.

On Tuesday the women's golf invitation tournament took place, with the players tramping in, as they finished for a buffet lunch at the Club house. Mrs. Fred G. Boyce, Jr., was the chairman of the affair, with Mrs. Belvidere Brooks and Miss Letitia Scott assisting.

On Wednesday forty guests assembled at a bridge tea given by Mrs. Wilbert Hincley, a guest at the Rockaway.

In the last match before the finals in the Farr Cup tournament which was played off last week, S. H. Pillsbury won over E. R. Sargent 1 up on 18, and J. L. Barr, Jr., won by default over A. C. Nelson. J. L. Barr, Jr., and S. H. Pillsbury will meet soon for the finals.

The Club championship for golf was competed for Wednesday, the players starting from scratch.

Next Monday will see the beginning of the annual senior tennis tournament, with men's and women's doubles, mixed doubles, and singles in play. The junior boys' singles started Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry True Harmon of Bonnie Brae, Bass Rocks, held an at home today, Saturday, to meet Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown, who gave a recital of negro folk songs and read plantation sketches.

Arrivals at the Moorland: Louise C. Rapalje, A. C. Weaver, Miss M. L. Maxwell, New York City; Miss M. Randles, Miss I. Olliffe, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Taylor, Hammondsport, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Minard, E. Belle Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ketcham, Hackensack, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. R. Cade Wilson, Summit, N. J.; Florence G. Kenworthy, Emily Rommel, Overbrook, Pa.; Mrs. W. Kennedy Cromwell, W. Franklin Cromwell, Mr. and Mrs. C. Gordon Pitt, Isabelle J. Whedbee, Louise S. Levering, Dr. Paul H. Clough, Dr. Mildred Clough, Paul Clough, Eleanor Clough, Baltimore; Elise A. Phinney, Detroit; Gwethalyn Jones, Lake Forest, Ill.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

DEAR DAPHNE:

I am sitting on my trunk writing this, because I've stuffed so many things into an entirely inadequate piece of luggage that it refuses to close sufficiently for me to fasten the straps. My other trunk—the large one—has already gone, and this one follows tomorrow. Tonight I help Mervyn pack (in other words, I pack for Mervyn) and last night we put Aunt Gussie on the train, along with 47 different suitcases (slight exaggeration) and wished her Godspeed.

Today has been one long series of annoyances, what with me wanting the car for last minute jaunts into town, and Mervyn grabbing it to dash off in other directions. To crown all, an army of red ants entered just as Aunt Gussie departed, overrunning the pantry and getting into the bread. I ate half a roll this morning to find the other half simply crawling with the little beasts!

Directly after breakfast I ordered the car and zipped into town to L. E. Andrews where I purchased a can of some anti-ant concoction that sent them skiting pronto. At the same time I remembered the roses, and bought a can of the new Evergreen Spray guaranteed fatal for rose beetles and cut, cabbage, and currant worms.

Then there were moths to think of, and I got a package of Anti-Moth. Moths brought to mind the drawing room curtains, which in turn reminded me of the windows, so I added a Wunda Glass cleaner. Thinking of the windows shining recalled the linoleum which didn't, and I bought a can of Devoe Linoleum Varnish. The idea of varnish called up a vision of the back porch, from which the paint is peeling; result, a can of Devoe moss green house paint.

From the paint it was but a short step to the padlocks and hinges which we have needed all season and neglected to acquire. Just think, I have been annoyed ever since I came to Brackmoor by a rusty hinge that creaks desirably every time I open the linen closet door, and never, all the times I've been in L. E. Andrews, have I thought to buy a new one!

Another thing we needed was new shutters to put over the windows for the winter, because most of our old ones got broken in the heavy storms last year. Banner, in a moment of rare good nature, offered to make some more, although I'm quite sure he repented him of his generosity when I came out with a large saw, a new hammer, and some nails. He brightened up, however, when I presented him with a jack-knife in appreciation of his services this summer—and a bid for his favor during the next!

Just as I was climbing into the car, I thought all of a sudden of at least five people to whom I most certainly must take remembrances! Of course, with all the shopping I had done, I had left these presents till the last possible moment, and there I was, the day before leaving, and a thousand things to look after. Panic stricken I backed out of the car, to the astonishment of Banner, and dashed down to Blanchard's, where I began and ended a frantic search for several inexpensive but acceptable gifts.

Do you know the McClelland Barclay line? McClelland Barclay is well known as an illustrator, and now he has gone in for designing bronzes—small things, and low priced, for the most part, but very artistic. I bought two little bronze ashtrays, one of which was shaped like a shell, and the other like a lily pad, both of which had tiny, very personable bronze frogs for snuff-ers. One I saw, that was especially lovely, represented a lily pond, and had a swan for a snuffer, and in another two sea horses standing back to back with droll importance, formed a handle. Then there was a seal which balanced a bowl on its nose, and became a fernery. (You can figure that out, can't you? The fern grows in the bowl, and the bowl stands on the nose of the seal.) All the bronze is given a soft green finish, which makes it very decorative.

For two gay young things of my acquaintance, I bought lilliputian glass balls of Mimosa perfume, that stand on square black bases. The fragrance of Mimosa, which, if memory does not play me false, is the Spanish for "butterfly," and refers to a flower called by that name because of its resemblance to said insect, is both haunting and delicate. I bought a ball of it for myself, too.

In cases where I only wanted to give a small gift, (to people who had entertained me, and the like) I found some tiny Chinese embroidered handkerchief cases that just filled the bill. Beside being exquisite things in themselves, each held a pastel or white hanky with a ship or something applied on it.

My next duty was to take the flat silver to the Gloucester National Bank, and stow it away in the safe deposit box. That done, I was to write to Aunt Gussie immediately and report having done so. ("You are so absent-minded, Anne," said the Relative, "that I want you to be sure to inform me the moment you have put away the silver.")

You can imagine my emotions on recalling that there was not a scrap of stationery, not even a penny postal, in the house! and Aunt G isn't one that can be written to on any ten cent block. Nothing but the best white vellum or linen when you're addressing her!

"W. G. Brown's," I thought, "they'll be sure to have some." So Banner turned the car around, and I made up my mind to buy one box of stationery, and nothing else. When I tell you that I came out with four boxes of stationery, three packs of cards, a five year diary, an address book, and full paper equipment for a picnic, you can estimate my power of resistance.

There was a whole table of stationery and very nice quality it was, too, for 50c; then, of course, there was a more expensive line that included the heavy vellum and lovely Eaton linens.

Remembering the Relative, I bought her a double pack of playing cards which set me back $1.25. She is by nature an avid and avaricious bridge fiend, who'd do anything short of palming a card to win the prize. All the cards at Brackenmoor are worn to tatters from overwork, so I thought she'd welcome these new and elegant packs that sport a ducal crest (it looks like one, anyway) and will stand abuse.

For one of my more urban friends I selected a box of cocktail hour cards whose backs are decorated with a rather sophisticated motif, (75c, double pack) and for myself, who loathes any game except Michigan, a set of amusing but inexpensive ones.

When I bought the picnic things I had no definite aim in view. I bought them merely because I liked them, they were so cleverly constructed, and so gaily colored. There were spoons and forks, the edges neatly rounded so as not to cut you (have you ever been cut with a paper fork? I have, and I don't care to repeat the performance — couldn't eat anything salt for three days without it making my lip sting). Then there were plates, of course, some of them divided into compartments, and napkins with bright designs on them.

Fortunately for duds like me, Brown's will gift wrap packages for you, thereby saving the recipients of your bounty from receiving lumpy packages wound up in last Christmas' holly-strewn tissue.

I had a list all made out of the things I simply could not afford to forget today, knowing full well that I am but too prone to be sidetracked by some bauble displayed in a store window. After puzzling a while over my handwriting, which seemed to have been executed with carefree abandon, I found that I was supposed to make a farewell tour of the post office to see if Aunt G. had received a communication from Hornblower and Weeks, and to have all mail forwarded to her Worcester address. Next on the docket was the First National market, where I was to stock up on provisions sufficient to see us through the day. The Cape Pond Ice people had to be told that we will require no more ice this season (they have to make a special trip to get down on our promontory) and that you wanted one of their Coolators sent to you (bully for you, you'll never regret it!). About that time I became ravenously hungry, so I went into Barker's and had a peach soda—I nearly wept into it, realizing that it was my last—and then came to with a nasty shock to find that I hadn't a cent in my pocketbook, and would be forced to borrow enough from Banner to pay for my indulgence!

That brought to mind the fact that I was absolutely without one cent for tomorrow's journey—I hadn't even bought my ticket. Obviously, a trip to the Cape Ann National Bank was in order!

To save time I sent Banner after a supply of Gorton Pew products, and a chicken for fricasseeing—or however you spell it—at the Birdseye store on Pleasant street. By the bye, I do hope there will be more of these frosted food stores start up around the country. If you've never tried their products you have no idea how perfectly delicious they are. They're especially nice in winter, because you can obtain really fresh vegetables at them, and don't have to depend on canned stuff.

After lunch I remembered that I had entirely overlooked the matter of gas and electric bills, so Banner and I once more breezed over to town. In the Gas Company's office I spotted their latest and most luxuriously-appointed stove, which has, beside the usual features, a radio, and a clock that you can set for whatever time you want to peer into your oven when a bell will ring to remind you. There is also a place for your monogram if you want one.

I inquired about your sunbeam Mix-master, at the Electric Co. and found it to be already in transit. How you will enjoy it! I hope, as time goes on you will be able to add new appliances. They're not expensive and with them your mixer will grind meat, slice, shred and grate vegetables, crush ice, peel potatoes, open cans, grind coffee, sharpen knives, polish the silverware, turn the ice cream freezer, and make regular soda fountain drinks.

Whoops! there are strange creaking noises from this trunk I'm sitting on, and I can feel it sagging under me, so I think I'd better end this off quick before I bust the lid and am obliged to transport my wardrobe in a brown paper parcel!

Tonight I am going to Stage Coach Inn for dinner with Chubby and Jolyon—that is, if I can circumvent Mervyn, who has been watching me with a lynx eye, as if wondering if I might try to put one over on him. If I am unable to make a reasonable excuse for leaving the house at six o'clock, I shall have to dine at home.

So long, and I'll write when I get home and make arrangements about coming to stay with you for a while. I forgot to say that I shall have as a travelling companion on tomorrow's journey, Annie Laurie, who rides in a stylish and very comfortable cat-box!

Goodbye in haste,

As ever,

C. ANNE SHORE.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Endicott of Worcester are enrolled in the Bay View summer colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wiley of Wakefield are enjoying the summer months at their Bay View home.

Mr. Robert Wakeham of Somerville is staying at Bay View with his children, Miss Mjude Wakeham and Mr. and Mrs. Balouchi.

Mrs. Margaret T. Gilmore of Hillside Court, Lanesville, and her daughter, Mrs. Catherine McDonald, and children, Richard and Genevieve visited the Sudbury Arms recently.

MERCHANTS' ISLAND — ANNISQUAM RIVER

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Merchant and daughters of Gloucester have as usual made their summer headquarters at the Merchant cottage.

Another of the Merchant cottages is occupied by Miss Emma and Howard Merchant of Gloucester and by Manton E. Merchant of Brooklyn.

A Philadelphia family who have made the island their summer home for several seasons returning another season is Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henry and daughters Blanche and Phyllis.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Turner of Greenwood are also former campers who maintain their summer home on the island.

Cottagers of long standing still holding allegiance to the island as their summer home are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cannell who have with them Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cannell and Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Cannell of Everett.

Mr. and Mrs. William McKie and daughter Gertrude of Greenwood have passed the season at their cottage.

Leon Searles of Chelsea is the veteran in point of summer residence on the island this being his 51st season. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Searles and son Harold of Chelsea are with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rounds and daughters of Malden are among the regular cottage contingent who returned for a summer's stay.

William Oliver and family of Medford have been in occupancy of the Oliver cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Burns and family of West Medford have been among the cottage sojourners of the season.

ANNISQUAM

Now that the Cape Ann Follies are over, members of the Annisquam Yacht Club can settle down again, shake the tantalizing tunes of "I've Got Personalities—teehee" and "We Are Jolly Banker Boys" from their ears, and plan something else to make life merry. Right now they're launching a costume party and county fair, to which everyone is supposed to come gayed up in gorgeous raiment. For atmosphere the Club is providing concessions, and a wisp of hay here and there. The affair will take place tonight (Saturday).

Mrs. Lewis Moore of Westwood, California, whose husband is connected with Fox Studios in Hollywood is visiting her mother, Mrs. Benjamin A. Smith, at her summer home, Wigwam point.

Dean Cromwell, mural decorator and illustrator, has returned from a trip through Spain and Italy where he has been making measure drawings of murals.

Miss Virginia Keys of New York is visiting Mrs. John C. Distler at Sheeprocks, Annisquam. Miss Hope Distler has gone to Long Island for a week's stay.

The Brymere Hotel gave a bridge party to guests and their friends on Tuesday evening.

Miss Flora Lawrence and Miss Grace Alexander of Buffalo, who have been camping in New Hampshire, are spending a short time on Cape Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Nearney of Attleboro and their daughter, Miss Helen, are visiting in Annisquam. Mrs. Nearney is the sister of the Right Reverend Phillips Endicott, Osgood of Leonard street, Annisquam.

At the Brymere: Mr. and Mrs. James Pottinger, Miss Ida Pottinger, Mrs. Randolph Osborn, Mr. R. G. Frye, Boston; Mrs. John Alden, Miss Margaret Alden, Miss Abbie Nichol, Miss A. W. Burgess, Miss M. S. Redican, Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Miles, Lexington; Mrs. A. C. Weston, Needham; Mrs. G. W. Butts, New Haven; Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Bennett, Watertown; Mr. and Mrs. George Nerney, Miss Helen Nerney, Attleboro; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Pierson, Wm. D. Pierson, Jr., Miss Laura Pierson, Mr. Edward Sanderson, Jr., Waterbury, Conn.; Miss Helen Ford, Cleveland; Mrs. Ross R. Hutchinson and children, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Jones, South Orange, N. J.; Miss Emily H. Fair, Mrs. S. A. Ivey, Mr. Wm. M. Hall, Montreal; Miss Leonora Dougan, Miss Viola Dougan, Springfield.

THE WILLOWS—ANNISQUAM

William G. Brown and family—Mr. Brown proprietor of the Boston store—are again enjoying the delights of this section at their summer home in this locality which affords one of the finest views on the river.

William G. Brown Jr. and family are also the occupants of their adjoining cottage which they have made their summer home for some years.

Mr. and Mrs. William McQueston and family of Lawrence are occupying the old Thomas Riggs house one of the oldest on the cape, the older part being built as early as 1660. Mrs. McQueston is a descendant of Thomas Riggs fifth town clerk and first schoolmaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton H. Lane are as for some seasons past among the cottage colony of this locality.

Mrs. Ada S. Cobb of Cambridge came early in the season to her summer home near the Mills. With her are Mr. and Mrs. William S. Anderson.

Mrs. George Mason and family of Cambridge have enjoyed their twenty-eighth season at Knoll cottage.

Miss Marion Nicholson with a party of ladies from Pittsfield are this year's occupants of Star cottage.

EASTERN POINT

The Cape Ann Garden Club is holding a meeting at the house of Mrs. Chester B. Humphrey, Ledge Lane, Eastern Point. Mrs. Humphrey and Mrs. Samuel H. Pillsbury will be the hostesses. Mrs. James Lyall Stuart of Sewickley, Pa., is giving a luncheon to some of the members before the meeting.

SUNBEAM LEADS

ROCKPORT, Aug. 16.—The Pleon Yacht Club fleet completed the fifth day of its annual cruise as it arrived in this harbor late today after a racing run from the Isles of Shoals. Donald Watson's M-B Sunbeam took the honors today, not only leading his own class but defeating the fleet boat for boat to capture the trophy for the squadron run in a light north-easterly which flattened to nothing shortly after noon.

The Mudjেকেwis won the cruising class trophy as her rivals conceded her the victory and resorted to power.

The cruise will disband tomorrow after a racing run from this port to Marblehead weather permitting. The summary:

seven more than the old mark made in 1932.

Yachtsmen from Manchester, Eastern Point, Annisquam, Conomo Point, and the American Yacht Club, at Newburyport enjoyed a Cape Ann fish chowder at noon. The Eastern Point and Annisquam fleets raced here.

In the afternoon 12 classes started the race from off Bearskin Neck. Courses were triangular all inside Sandy Bay breakwater, although the larger boats were given an extra two-mile hitch along the shore to Oak Rock Buoy, off Thatchers.

Jacob D. Cox Jr.'s Taja led three other R boats in a close finish with 30 seconds between the first three. The Triangles as usual, mustered the greatest strength with 15 starters, Hastings Gamage's Injun from Eastern Point winning easily.

Homer Clark's Sans Souci, tilted by his son, Geoffrey, was tuned up for the Narragansett Bay Star Class championships by winning from Ara.

Other winners included Bobeno, Sandboy, Swan, Ibis, Flying Fish, Greenhorn, Capterpillar II, and Billie.

SPINDRIFT WINS

GLoucester, Aug. 18—Cohasset Yacht Club had a good run today, Spindrift, Commodore Charles Higginson's flagship, making a runaway of it and leading the flotilla of 15 past Dogs Bar to the anchorage in Smith Cove by a margin of 25 minutes corrected time over the Monhegan. The distance covered was 21 miles. The Spindrift sailed a straight course all the way.

The fleet got under way at 9:50 this morning, a light southwest wind prevailing. As they reached

ORIOLE AND PERCH WIN IN ANNISQUAM RACE

GLoucester, Aug. 18—A fine southwest breeze, which completely filled Ipswich Bay from start to finish, gave the Annisquam boats the best race in the season this afternoon.

The course was leeward-windward to the outer mark and back. The water in the bay was fairly smooth.

Oriole in the Bird class and Perch in the Fish class were the winners. The summary:

ALLEGRA WINS

ROCKPORT, Aug. 18—A stiff southwest gave the Sandy Bay yachts a steady scupper breeze this afternoon, three classes being routed over the new course, the turning point of which is at Davis Neck on the Bay View shore. The going was leeward-windward.

A fine breeze gave all a full rap during the entire voyage. The three cornered fight of the Triangles was the feature, Allegra grabbing a 28 second lead.

In the Sandy Bay class, Skipper John Chianciola won as did Laura Cooney in Class I. The summary:

OLD GLOUCESTER

the loss of the fishermen at sea and in privateering none but the women were left and it became a deserted village left to the women and their protectors a multiplicity of dogs—hence the name.

If we accept the supposition that this is where Thorwald and the Norsemen landed in 1006 and Thorwald received a mortal wound in an encounter with the Indians, it is the place named by them Krossanes. Samuel de Champlain rounded the cape in 1605 which we have seen he named Cape aux Isles. Again in 1606 he entered and mapped what is now Gloucester harbor which he named Le Beauport—the Harbor Beautiful. John Smith as we have seen named the cape Tragibigzanda, changed by Charles I to Cape Anne. Named Gloucester when incorporated as a town in 1639.

Beacon or Governor's hill so named because a triangular beacon was erected on it in colonial times to warn the surrounding country of the approach of an enemy and also as a landfall for the incoming fishermen. This completes the "high spots" whose name derivation excites the curiosity of the stranger within the gates. As we have said the names of persons affixed to certain localities and spots are those of the early settlers as Dolliver's neck, Vincent's cove, etc.

Straits of Dover would be the line of demarkation beyond which—in air or land—the "thou shall not pass" was decreed it came at the psychological moment to give added impetus and coherency to the power of Hitler. Hindenburg's death clinched it more firmly. "Aut Hitler; aut nihil." For this declaration of England openly proclaimed a union of France, the Netherlands and Britain for defensive purposes when and if the people from over the Rhine are again impelled by their ancient urge to overflow the territory to the setting sun.

And the rest is on the laps of the Gods.

TWO DOUBLE WINNERS
IN ANNISQUAM RACES

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 19—Morning and afternoon races were sailed at Annisquam today, the first being a postponed race of Aug. 11.

Two double-header victories were recorded, the Woodbury boat Flamingo in the Birds taking the honors of both sessions while a similar markup was recorded for Albert Hale in the Flying Fish.

In the afternoon in the Fish class with a stiffer wind the course was extended to the outer mark. The summary:

TABASCO V VICTOR

AT EASTERN POINT

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 19—The former Annisquam, Tabasco V recently put into service after two years in the boat house, again demonstrated by winning this afternoon that she is a worthy competitor of Taja, which has been having things her own way in the Eastern Point R class. Harry Wheeler held the helm today.

In the triangles Carleilla was the victor.

The knockabouts sailed another of the junior championship series. Kate Boyce in Maryland, piloting her craft to victory. The summary:

MINERS TURNING TO
ARTS AND CRAFTS

The miners of West Virginia, facing permanent unemployment in the soft-coal industry, have taken up certain art crafts to meet the desperate situation. Encouraged and organized by the American Friends Service Committee, the mountaineers are sending to New England samples of their work, hand-made furniture, wrought-iron articles, and hand woven fabrics, which are commanding a ready sale for their intrinsic merit, apart from any humanitarian appeal.

An exhibit and sale of these attractive articles will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, August 28 and 29 in Miss Flagg's Tea Room, "The Barnacle," River road, Annisquam. Come and see this exhibit.

PROF. BROOKS—DANTE

Prof. Alfred Brooks of Swathmore college is giving a series of weekly lectures at the rooms of the Gloucester Literary Society taking for his theme one of the greatest poets of all time Dante Alighieri, four such having been delivered. Outstanding features in the life of the poet, his relationship with Beatrice and the Divine Comedy all have been treated critically and understandingly.

SHEFFIELD WARE

Miss Sudam Babson gave a talk before an appreciative assemblage at the rooms of the Historical society, Monday afternoon on Sheffield ware on which she is an authority, specimens of this artisanship illustrating her text, the whole being interesting and informative.

AT THE NORTH

are Jack Mulhall, Joe Morrison and Jan Duggan.

On Friday and Saturday will be shown Edna Mae Oliver and James Gleason in a mystery thriller with plenty of comedy. A beautiful young teacher is slain in a school-room and weird escapes and hilarious comedy alternate up to the unexpected finish when the mur-derer is revealed to the dumb-founded police. Bruce Cabot, Gert-rude Michael and Regis Toomey are in the cast of this most entertaining of funny mysteries.

Each program will hold the latest of short treats including latest event of world news, comedies, screen cartoons and other novelties.

Among coming attractions are "Many Happy Returns" with Burns and Allen and Guy Lombardo; "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers" with Wheeler and Woolsey; "Here Comes the Groom" with Jack Haley and Patricia Ellis and "Whom the Gods Destroy" with Walter Connolly, Robert Young and Doris Kenyon.

"LILIOM"

"Liliom," the most popular and successful of the works of Ferenc Molnar is the production offered by the Gloucester School of the Little Theatre this Friday and Saturday.

The setting of "Liliom" is at a carnival playing outside Budapest. The play, aside from showing the inner workings of the leading characters, Liliom and Julie, gives a faithful picture of the show people and hangers on about the carnival. "Liliom" was the play which brought fame to Eve Le Gallienne and Joseph Schildkraut when it was presented in America for the first time by the Theatre Guild.

A novel feature of the presentation by the Little Theatre will be the outdoor carnival which will precede the play, beginning at 7:45.

A REVIVAL

Because of the popularity of the melodrama, "Gold in the Hills," by J. Frank Davis, which was presented recently by the Gloucester School of the Little Theatre, the play will be revived for one performance this Tuesday, August 28.

END OF SEASON SHOW

For their last show of the season the Gloucester School of the Little Theatre has chosen Gert-rude Tonkonogy's uproarious comedy, "Three Cornered Moon." This performance will see the return of two of last season's favorite players, Katherine Raht, who did such fine work in the "Far Away Hills," and Jane Bancroft, whose portrayal of Christina in "The Silver Cord" won her many admirers.

Others in the cast of "Three Cornered Moon," which will be presented August 31st and September 1st, are John Mann, Theodore Tiller, Julia Meyer, Dudley Herbert, Charles Whipple, Edward Brooks, Jr., and Hope Hubbard.

GLOUCESTER SCHOOL OF THE LITTLE THEATRE

The conquests of Belinda, A. A. Milne's charming heroine, furnished the plot for a delightful comedy given by the Gloucester School of the Little Theatre last Friday and Saturday evenings.

Although we can only guess at Belinda's age, we have ample opportunity to gauge the magnitude of her fascination, for before the first act is over she has had two proposals of marriage, and is on her way to a third.

At the rise of the curtain, Belinda (Mrs. Tremayne) is expecting a call from either Mr. Baxter, her statistical admirer or her poet lover, Claude Devenish. To her great amazement, however, the first person to enter her garden, where she awaits her suitors, is none other than her daughter, Delia, home from a finishing school in Paris.

How to introduce Delia to Baxter and Devenish is rather a problem to Belinda. Scrutinized only by the eyes of love, she has basked in the comfortable age of "around thirty," but, as the mother of a grown up daughter, she could hardly complain if Baxter's mathematical mind made a few swift and accurate calculations, and Devenish's florid compliments grew a little less lyrical.

"Darling," begs Belinda, "would you mind, just at first, being introduced as my niece?" and Delia, who adores her mother, gladly acquiesces, even to the point of assuming a false name, and being called Miss Robinson.

This decided, Belinda is ready to receive her gallants who have arrived together,—and consequently out of temper. Both propose and both are accepted, conditionally. At the suggestion of Devenish, the romantic, they are sent on a quest, the winner to be given her hand. The first to find a certain Mr. Robinson, description: mole on the left wrist, she will marry.

Although Belinda finds it unnecessary to mention it to them, the gentleman they seek is none other than her husband, who left her eighteen years ago after a foolish quarrel. Whether he is still living or not she has no idea, but at least the search frees her of deciding between Devenish and Baxter, and she did tell them truth when she said that Robinson was Delia's long lost father.

Soon after the departure of the knights errant, a stranger wanders into Belinda's garden, taking her entirely by surprise. Coincidentally as it may seem, his name is Robinson.

Something about him intrigues Belinda, and, since the attraction is mutual, she has no difficulty in annexing him to her list of suitors, of whom he soon becomes the favored one. During a conversation with Devenish about his adventures, Robinson displays to the young poet a scar on his wrist, occasioned by a scrap with a lion, and inadvertently discloses — a mole.

A short time before, Devenish would have announced his discovery to Belinda with all the dramatic power at his command, but since meeting her Titian-haired niece, Delia, the idea of marrying Belinda no longer thrills him. Considerately, he passes over the information to Baxter, hitherto his arch enemy.

The precise little Baxter, intensely pleased with himself for what he deems his skill of detection, promptly claims his reward, but when he learns that his beloved has a daughter of marriageable age, and so must, herself, be about twenty years older than he thought her, he crawls, with dignity, from the impending union.

As for Belinda, deserted now by two of her admirers, she turns to the third, who is, of course, already her husband, and decides to settle down and be a model wife — which she certainly never will be. At the final curtain Delia and Devenish have become engaged, and Baxter has discovered that Belinda has been keeping something else from him—the fact that she has a well stocked and up-to-date library, which he seems to find more interesting than the lady herself.

Marion Sawyer gave us a Belinda of surpassing delight. Dear, lovable Belinda, a bit rattle-brained at times, to be sure, but possessing a sympathetic heart for all her bewitching, coquettish ways, she was portrayed with absolute fidelity by Miss Sawyer, the finest actress the Little Theatre has ever had.

We liked Theodore Tiller, too, who was given the role of Devenish, the young poet. Mr. Tiller has a splendid sense of comedy, and is at his best in a character such as this one, a young man with a sense of humor about everything except himself. Devenish's love of attitudinizing was exceeded only by Belinda's; they were both always careful to be caught in a pose suggestive of something flattering to themselves.

As for Baxter, the statistician, poor pompous little man, he was extremely well portrayed by Conrow Miller. Augusta Farnsworth's elfin charm appeared to advantage in the part of Delia, the beloved if sometimes forgotten daughter of Belinda, and John Mann was as likeable and amusing as ever as Mr. Robinson (né Tremayne).

Both Lester Lang's sets, the garden and the drawing room, drew applause the moment the curtain rose. Mr. Lang was assisted by Martin Fallon, Theodore Packard and F. Norton. This week's performance is Ferenc Molnar's "Liliom."
